

New Sermon Series: Apr. 8

We are all in it. The problem doesn't boil down to discipline, organization, or perfecting the schedule. It is not pressure from parents or children. The problem is this: there is not enough time to get everything done that we're convinced (or maybe others have convinced us) needs to get done. We feel the squeeze and every once in a while drop the ball. Sometimes, it is a project at work; other times, it is disappointing our children or our spouse. "Don't worry, I'll make it up to you," we say. So we speed up. Try even harder. It always feels like we are putting out fires or apologizing.

If this sounds at all familiar, we believe Jesus has come to help us live life to its best. He warned us that in this life we will experience this type of pressure. But he also promises to lead us into a new way of living. One where we can have both peace and hope that we are making the best decisions even in the most difficult of circumstances. God wants to bless us. This means he wants more than just surviving; He wants us to shine. The sermon topics will include the following:

Apr. 8 - The Problem: Over-Committed Loneliness (Psalms 127)

Apr. 15 - Picking-Up The Pieces (Daniel 1:1-16)

Apr. 22 - Make A Plan (Daniel 2:1-24)

Apr. 29 - Make A Stand (Daniel 3:1-18)

May 6 - You Can Do It! But You Don't Have To Do It Alone! (Daniel 3:19-30)
